

Midyear Progress Report: Coach's Reflections

1. What surprised you in your reflections—either in the data you reported on, the process, your thoughts about next steps—anything? What were the surprises or ah-has?
2. How might you prioritize your clients this spring? What kind of work with that client will you prioritize? What's your thinking behind this decision?
3. What do you identify as the biggest challenge or obstacle in coaching during the first semester? How will you address this going forward?
4. What's the strongest piece of evidence that you have that your coaching resulted in changes in a teacher's practice which resulted in changes in student learning? For leadership coaches: changes in leader's practices that resulted in changes in teacher's practice that result in changes in student learning? If you don't have evidence, what might you gather in the second semester to show this connection?
5. What do you think is the most salient learning that you're taking away from these mid-year reports that you'd like to share with a team of coaches?